Goin' Batty (Nature Cat)

Goin' Batty is an episode from Nature Cat that was aired on July 12th, 2016.

Contents

Plot

Why This Episode Sucks

Redeeming Qualities

Reception

Plot

Nature Cat and his friends are going on a hiking trip to 'Cocono Cave'. Nature Cat's impatience makes him negligent to Daisy's advice on keeping safe and well prepared for long term ventures into Nature. Nature Cat faces various dangers, like being bitten by mosquitoes, sprayed by a skunk and infected by poison ivy. When Nature Cat is stung by a bee, Nature Cat resigns from the adventure feeling his feline instincts were unpremeditated. After leaving his friends behind and intending to be Fred, the indoor cat, Nature Cat soon learns the importance of risk awareness and safe planning in nature.

Why This Episode Sucks

1. Nature Cat, while still likable, was at his WORST in this episode. He quits being Nature Cat and goes back to being Fred the indoor cat after he gets bitten by mosquitoes, sprayed by a skunk, infected by poison ivy, and stung by a bee.
2. In addition, Nature Cat has gotten flanderized in this episode.
3. When Nature Cat's friends tell him to like nature again, he doesn't care and leaves.
4. This episode treats Nature Cat even worse than 13 Reasons Why.

Redeeming Qualities

1. Nature Cat is still a likable character.
2. Nature Cat learns how to be safe in nature in the middle.
3. The ending isn't too bad.

Reception

This episode has recieved negative reviews from fans of the show, most likely because of Nature Cat's quitting.

Retrieved from "https://terriblenicheshows.miraheze.org/w/index.php?title=Goin%27_Batty_(Nature_Cat)&oldid=91"

This page was last edited on 21 February 2020, at 12:10.

Content is available under Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-SA 4.0) unless otherwise noted.